

EnterpriseTenFold Speed, Quality, and Power unleash incredible opportunities for your business. For example you can conceive of business adjustments today, change your production application tomorrow, and be running your business differently the day after. But such agility requires discipline and organization to ensure that you make such changes safely and with suitable controls. And your applications team is mostly business analysts – people without the IT background to understand backups, avoiding regressions, release processes, et cetera.

Managing ProductAreas teaches business analysts and IT experts the infrastructure and processes you use to administer an EnterpriseTenFold application throughout its lifecycle: conception, design, build, test, integration, deployment, and change. During this three-day class, an expert instructor explains what a ProductArea is; which ProductAreas you need and why; how you install and administer EnterpriseTenFold in a ProductArea; how and when you release between ProductAreas; how to use ProductAreas to maximize team productivity and production stability, and more.
